

Colne Valley High School Curriculum Intent – Geography

Geographical knowledge is taught to develop a deeper understanding of the world around us through processes that shape our world and human reactions within it. Geographical knowledge should be seen as important, useful and desirable in the modern world. Experiences in geography should encourage wider intrigue of our world, support everyday understanding, real world case studies and the academic rigor of the subject. Through teaching the essential knowledge students will be able to investigate, predict and examine geographical situations and processes
